A SUMMER THOUGHT.

Dazzling the landscape lies;
Blue, gold, and green—
Even to tear-stained eyes
Beauteous, I ween.

Blue sky, widespreading trees,
Green, still, and tall;
Sunshine in golden ease
Slanting o'er all.

Happy hearts wandering,
Sun on them too;
Streamlets meandering
Fair meadows through.

Presently sinks the sun
Crimson to rest;
After his work is done,
Seeks he the west.

Homeward the happy hearts
Stroll o'er the lea;
Silent the stream departs,
Bound for the sea.

Hushed stand the lordly trees,
Sentinels strong;
Whispers the evening breeze
Gently along.

Gray-tinted shadows creep
Over the sky;
Deep in a dreamless sleep
Soon all things lie.

Sorrow seems lost in rest,
Care in repose—
Wrapt in oblivion blest
Earth and her woes.

Only I linger still,
Loth to depart
From these calm scenes that kill
Pain at my heart!

WITHOUT CAPITAL.

How the Refusal of a Loan Led to Success.

"In spite of everything I can do, I am still penniless," and Ralph Gorden buried his face in his hands.

Ralph had sense, but he lacked capital. Capital and he would have been an assured success. For this purpose he would consult Mr. Horton, the banker.

"Good evening, Ralph," said the elderly gentleman, looking over his gold bowed glasses and exhibiting a very cordial and patronizing manner.

Ralph was always respectful, and if you will study his career you will readily perceive how important a part politeness played in his social and business relations.

"I wish to engage in business."

"Have you capital?"

"No, sir; but—"

"Ah!"

"If I could secure a loan from you I could amass a for—"

"I beg your pardon. I never lend money without real estate security."

The answer was decisive.

"First failures have been the successes of many, Ralph. Go try."

Ralph was not discouraged. But on the following morning, when the sun rose in his old time glory, the birds sang their wild familiar songs and business resumed its wonted clamor, he took little note as he hurried along the leading thoroughfare of the city.

"Will you lend me one thousand dollars to set myself up in business?" he inquired of Mr. Simpson, one of the prominent men of the place.

"What security?"

"None. I want it as a favor."

"Would be glad to accommodate you, Mr. Gorden, but business men don't do business in that way."

Receiving this all kindly, he sallied out and entered the private family of an esteemed friend.

"Mr. Garton, can I negotiate a loan of one thousand dollars?"

"For your sake I must refuse."

Ralph was turning; yet, notice that the placid equanimity of his temper remained inviolate. If he possessed no capital, he had suavity and forbearance in happy abundance.

"Be seated, Ralph," continued this practical man, "and I will endeavor to show you how I am your friend in not being your friend. That sounds a trifle paradoxical. But, listen, for you are in no hurry. If you are in a hurry you will not succeed anyway. From what I have heard and seen myself you appear to have an abnormal feeling that you cannot succeed unless you have capital. Now, if you will investigate the matter statistically you will find that nine hundred and ninety men out of every thousand who have made a success of business had absolutely nothing to start with."

"Yes, sir."

"And if you will take the trouble to pursue your investigation you will find that a large percentage of business failures are directly traceable to too much assistance at the start."

Ralph Gorden was meeting new surprises.

"Now for your own benefit, I will not lend you a red cent."

Ralph's countenance fell. And yet he had sufficient sense to understand that all the advice received emanated from the kindest business motives.

"But, Ralph, I'll tell you what I will do. You strike right out in some direction, and if you fail, after an honest trial, you will not be compelled to repay an old debt."

"By George, that's so!"

"And, furthermore, I will make this proposition. If you will succeed without capital, I will give you one thousand dollars!"

Ralph was dumfounded.

"I believe you are right," and Ralph returned to the street.

On his way through the chief places of business, he said to himself:

"Wonder how all these men became so rich!" He hesitated. "I will ask them."

He knew Bangs, Barton & Co.

"I beg your pardon, gentlemen; may I ask you how you became so rich?"

"By being penniless at the start!"

He also knew the firm of Aldrich, Page & Co., by reputation.

"What made you so rich, gentlemen?"

"By being poor at the start, and not a cent's worth of credit."

Walker & Co. had just failed; and for the matter of that they had been partial failures all along. They had had plenty of money to start with.

"So, so," and Ralph walked thoughtfully along. "Then I am the capital I!" and returning home, he rolled up his sleeves, so to speak, and went to work.

People always said that Ralph was a worker and industrious. "But, ah!" exclaimed the old heads, "he can earn money, but he cannot keep it!"

These same people were soon surprised, however, to see a little, unpretentious corner grocery started, with Ralph as sole proprietor.

"It wasn't much," some said, "but it was a beginning, a beginning!"

Curious people came in. Men with "inquiring eyes." Men with their arms thrust in cadaverous pockets. Some sat on the cracker barrels and looked on. They hadn't ever tried to succeed, and dropped in to see how such an attempt was supposed to work. A lad came in.

"A penny's worth o' figs."

The article was handled as if it had been twenty pounds of sugar for one dollar.

"Five cents worth of peanuts."

These were neatly done up in a little saw-edged paper bag. Ralph was a model of neatness and politeness, and his white apron and square paper hat gave him a sort of dashy app

"A half dozen eggs."

The orders were slight.

"Two pounds of butter."

Ralph was encouraged.

"One barrel of Haxall flour!"

This was quite a leap.

"Will deliver it after dinner."

Yet his visitors were still far in excess of his sales. But one thing had been demonstrated. He had got the people to coming that way! Could he hold them.

"A new broom sweeps clean," he reflected. "But time will tell."

"Well, Ralph's hasn't much in his store, to be sure," said the skeptical, "yit he's er risin', er risin', an' that's somethin'."

Ralph's horse and wagon consisted of himself and a wheelbarrow! He delivered his few goods in this unpretentious manner. The boys called it Ralph's "one hoss express."

The "new grocer" said little, thereby showing tact, but kept his sleeves rolled up and attended strictly to business. He had no capital, but earning a few dollars, he secured a little merchandise on thirty days' credit. He had one thing, he had manners, he had sociability, he had accommodation. He was just as sociable with the man that bought a jackknife as the one that bought a shovel. With these as leading elements of success, he met his first bills, paid cash for his second order of goods.

Two months had gone. Six. Now he had a clerk. But no horse. Six months more. He had a second clerk.

Ralph began to receive congratulations from all sides. The friend who would not lend him a red cent, and who was to give him one thousand dollars, came sauntering in.

"You don't seem to need borrowed foney now, Ralph."

"No, thank you. I have a thousand o lend," he laughed.

"Ralph, you have won the first thousand dollars. The rest will come easy enough. It is the first thousand that decides the fate of millions."

Ralph was very happy. His business increased. His friends multiplied, and young men came to him to borrow their first thousand dollars. Time wore on. The little corner grocery store became too small. In more commodious quarters they were soon established. For it was "R. Gorden & Co., Grocers" now. And the young man who had no capital was the leading grocery firm of the city.

"So you could succeed without capital, Ralph," said his practical friend.

"Yes; and it has been a good lesson to me."

"Which you couldn't have learned if I had loaned you a thousand dollars," interrupted the other.

"No, sir. And to-day I am saying to the young men of my community: 'You can succeed without capital. Try.'"

And Ralph's face glowed. He had been an assured success. And he still superintended his own business.—Horace Walker, in Yankee Blade.

A TELEGRAPHER AS KING.

Mademba I. of Segon Promoted to the Throne from the Key.

A sudden favorable turn of fortune does not always alienate the lucky individual from his habitual occupations. This more or less wise saw is applicable to the case of the present king of Segon, who was put on the throne of his black kingdom by Col. Archinard, when his royal predecessor, Ahmadou, took to flight for his safety.

Mademba, the present monarch, is a native of the country over which he at present rules, but was formerly controller of telegraphs at Senegal. Before accepting his royal state, he made it a condition that his name should continue to be inscribed on the list of telegraph servitors, and that his situation as king should be considered as subservient to that of his original employment.

Mademba must have learnt, either by intuition or from acute observation, that the lot of a monarch is less certain, in these days, than the position of an officer in the service of the "postes et telegraphes," and so preferred to keep in reserve what might one day prove to be a happy issue out of all his afflictions.

He has, no doubt, constantly one eye on his throne and the other one of memory on the office of his former telegraphic exploits. Should the future bring about for Mademba that change which is in the modern order of things, he may return to the tic-tic of his former days with the right to add to his title of preference that of "ex-king of Segon."

Politeness in telegraphic offices, although once seriously complained of by M. Guy de Maupassant, is generally the rule, even with the ordinary employes; but should Mademba I. of Segon ever return to his Senegalian bureau, his clients may expect to be treated in right royal fashion by a man who never lost sight of business, even when promoted to the honors of an African throne.—Galignani Messenger.

AMERICAN LITERARY PEOPLE.

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL will soon make a visit to England.

GOLDWIN SMITH suggests the formation of a club in Toronto where literary workers can meet and fraternize.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE began Greek at seventy, and now at seventy-two she has just read the plays of Sophocles in the original.

MR. GEORGE KEENAN has consented to become editor of the paper called Free Russia, provided $5,000 can be raised to remove the publication from London to New York.

MISS KATE FIELD resembles in no wise the conventional type of the lecturer and the "strong minded" woman. She has a keen, vivacious face, and she dresses in admirable taste.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES' library in his Boston home looks over the Charles river and furnishes a superb view of the distant spires and towers of Charleston and Somerville. Just at sundown the prospect is ideal.

MECHANICAL ADVANCEMENT.

A NOVELTY in bookbinding is announced in the employment in it of metal as a substitute for cardboard.

A NEW system of house wiring for electric lighting consists of fitting the building with continuous tubes of insulating material, through which the wires are drawn.

A NEW gumming machine for envelopes can gum, dry and deliver envelopes at the rate of 90,000 per hour, and at a cost of a little less than one-half cent per thousand.

A FIRM of stonecutters in Berlin have introduced a pneumatic chisel into their establishment. The workman holds the spring-like apparatus with both hands, and as he slides it over the surface of the stone or metal, the chisel, making 10,000 or 12,000 revolutions a minute, chips off particles.

A Baltimore Freak.

A Baltimore freak is a frog of good size and a trifle light in color, but apparently not different from any other frog. The freakishness developed when his frogship was worried, when instead of hopping off or giving utterance to the deep, sonorous note usually heard from frogs, he simply opened his mouth and cried. The frog is nothing if not human, and suggests, both in tone and volume, a bad, peevish child. The cry is not a single note, but several, and is continued even after the annoyance ceases.

A Pathetic Record.

The ex-Empress Eugenie, during her recent visit to France, was called upon to fill up a census paper. She made the entries in her own handwriting, made tremulous by rheumatism, and there is a great deal of history and no little pathos in the brief record: "Countesse de Pierrefond (Marie Eugenie), age 64; born at Grenada, Spain; naturalised French; a widow, had one child—a son; lives on her income; of no profession or business; a sojourner in France; lives usually in England; is traveling with two friends and four servants."

An Honest Man.

Great Lawyer (in cross-examination)—Huh! You consider the prisoner an honest man, do you?

Witness—An honester man never lived.

Great Lawyer (superciliously)—Will you kindly state on what you base that remarkable opinion?

Witness (hotly)—On the fact that he once tried to be lawyer, and failed.—Good News.

—"And what," asked the young woman who is sometimes facetious, "is the rank of the individual who brings up the rear with a bucket and a tin cup?" "O!" replied the member of the militia without hesitation, "he is a lemonade de camp."—Washington Post.

Potato Puff.

Take two cupfuls of mashed potatoes and stir into it two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, beating it into a cream before adding anything else. Then add two eggs beaten until they are very light and a cup of milk, salted to taste; mix all well together and pour into a deep dish and bake in a quick oven.

OVERDRAWN ACCOUNTS.

Old Father Time as the Cashier of a Great Bank.

Old Time sat as cashier behind the window of a bank where all men must do business. A long line of customers, too vast to count, came, each with his check in hand, to the wicket for his cash. I stood and watched the scene for hours, till it came my own turn to place my check under Father Time's gray and ancient scrutiny.

A well-dressed man, with confident air, with a hard, resolute face and yet lips bitten as if with pain, threw in his check.

"Your account is overdrawn," said Time. "I told your friend so yesterday who presented a check of yours."

"What? That's why I came myself. Overdrawn! I should have twenty years here yet to draw on!" exclaimed the excited gentleman, growing pale with every word.

"How old do you reckon yourself?" asked Cashier Time.

"Why, only fifty-five. And three-score-years-and-ten is the deposit to begin with."

"See," said Time, thrusting a great book under the poor man's eyes. "In 1854 you, being then nineteen years of age, drew three years in one. The next year, and the next, and the next you drew three years in one. You squandered them in dissipation. You frank them up. As Cleopatra, the Egyptian queen, dissolved pearls in a glass of wine and drank the costliest banquet cup that opulent vanity had ever seen, so you drank up the years between nineteen and twenty-three. You threw away days and nights as a king in old times threw coin to the rabble. When by the calendar you were aged twenty-five by my strict and accurate books you were thirty-five, and beginning to grow old."

"Very well," began the trembling figure in reply, "but I reorganized after that. Ten years lost, I then reformed."

"True. But in 1874 you drew days and months very fast again. For the sake of being rich you squandered strength like a spendthrift. You crowded three weeks into one for a long while. In ten years you lived out twenty; did the work of twenty, the worry, the fighting, the litigation, the travel, the greedy sins of twenty years. You have gotten your wealth. You have gained the whole world and lost your life. Whether you have lost your soul or not is not for me to say. God knows that. This bank does no business in eternity. The account is overdrawn sir. Step aside, old man of fifty-five, customers are waiting."

And while I looked the servants of the bank came in—Death, Dust and Forgetfulness—and carried him out.

Then came a haggard wretch whose name indorsed upon the back of a check read, "A. Suicide." He faltered on:

"I suppose this check is worthless. There is not another day for me."

"On the contrary, there are yet forty years, that you can draw against; happy, useful years, spent for man's good and God's praise."

"I doubt it. There must be some mistake."

"Not so. What shall I do with these years if you will not take them? No other man can use them; yet thousands would be glad of them, begging so pitifully. And there are so many thousands of unclaimed years, filled up within my vaults! They shall be added to eternity again when I, Old Time, go out of business. Yet eternity is no richer for them. Take your years and be happy in them as God intended."

But the foolish heart declined; and I saw the three servants come in and carry him out as they had Old Avarice before.

Then I saw tremendous checks paid out to Malice, Revenge, Jealousy, Evil Imaginations, Bad Thoughts, Discontent. Old Time could not help speaking his warning, and though it was none of his business, he said:

"Gentlemen, nothing draws such heavy drafts on a man's deposits of years of health and strength as unwholesome thoughts. They are more expensive than unwholesome deeds if possible. Look out that you do not overdraw your accounts."

Then I saw a young man at the window. Time asked:

"How will you have it, sir? In large bills or small?"

"In large, if you please. Let me live a year in a day. A year of pleasure crowded into one wild day! The good things of forty must be had and used up at twenty. I cannot wait."

And Old Time smiled with a sardonic curl of the lip as he observed how the young fool was making the same mistake that the old fool a few steps before had made. But the check was cashed in the big bills.

I saw, too, as I stood there, how men overdrew their accounts of Good Reputation. A man may, it seems, build up a reputation by long and faithful years which will withstand a good many blunders; he may check against it with careful words and thoughtless deeds for some time before that stored good reputation is wasted. On the whole, the better part of the community would rather believe good of one of their foremost fellow-citizens than evil; it is not pleasant to hear a scandal aired before the faces of their children; not pleasant to see an old friend fall; and many people are so related socially and commercially with this man of a leading position that his ruin would inflict a loss on them. Hence they keep his account good at the bank over which Time presides; they do it by excuses, lending their countenance to blundering spendthrift and hope for a change. But at last he who blunders beyond a certain point, who will not learn wisdom, is abandoned by his friends. Old Time, the cashier, then meets him at the window with a sharp refusal.

"Your account is overdrawn, sir. You are bankrupt. Men will no longer excuse you, nor will they trust you. You are written down a fool."

And I observed that three strange servants came in to carry him out—namely, Hunger, Contempt and Despair.

I saw, too, how men and women of brilliant gifts overdrew their accounts. The young actor, who bade fair to stand at the head of his profession before he was five-and-thirty, counted too highly upon the patience of an admiring public, and supposed they would overlook his drunkenness and carousals indefinitely. So the people did for a time. But when he had disappointed them night after night, when he neglected his study and relied on his "genius" and an occasional "spurt" of splendid work to make up, he passed the point of endurance. Time at his window dishonored his draft. The people spat him out. There were younger, cleaner, more conscientious men to be had. He was ruined.

So was ruined the great songstress who supposed the world could not get along without her voice. It was indeed a wonderful voice. But she overdrew her account; she flagrantly violated the proprieties of life; she undermined society by her example. The world turned to find a new voice. God is ever raising up new workmen with gifts as grand as the old. If not so grand the better sense of the world resolves to prefer and adopt the new instead of the old which has become unclean.

And so I look on women who counted too much on their beauty, and ability to charm, neglecting to be true; on youth who reckoned too highly their standing in the community as children of "old families" or on education, outward culture, or technical skill. "We can do a great many things that other people could not; and we shall be tolerated." Quite possible, up to a certain point. Clerks and master-workmen there were who were "sure their services could never be dispensed with, for who could be found who would take their places?" But there is always the risk of an overdrawn account soon; the surety of it at last.

I then took my place at the window with prayerful care. Heaven grant me to watch well my books, that the account be not overdrawn, neither in this world nor the next.—Harkley Harker, in N. Y. Weekly.

WHO ARE THE HAPPIEST?

According to One Authority People Whose Lives Are Devoted to Science.

The earl of Derby answered this question recently in an address to the Scientific and Technological school of Liverpool, an institution of which he was one of the founders. He said:

"Having known men of many professions, I should say that the happiest lives are those which have been devoted to science. Every step is interesting, and the success of those who do succeed is lasting.

"What general, what orator, what statesman, what man of letters can hope to leave a memory like that of Darwin? An invalid in health, a man who seldom stirred from home, a man until his later years very little known to the outer world, but who from his quiet study revolutionized the thought of Europe and will be remembered as long as Newton and Bacon.

"If fame be ever worth working for—I do not say it is—that kind of fame is surely the most durable and the most desirable of all."

These words are true of the disinterested men of science. We have never had in this country men more uniformly cheerful and good-tempered than Franklin, Rittenhouse and Jefferson, who spent most of the leisure of their lives in the pursuit of knowledge; and Prof. Agassiz was noted for the buoyancy of his spirits in every company where he felt at home. But we can say something similar of every person who has a pursuit suited to his talents and circumstances.

The happy people are they who have an occupation which they love, apart from any advantage it may bring them, one that they can pursue with generous ardor. It is the element of disinterestedness that cheers their lives, whether they are engaged in ordinary or extraordinary vocations; and this is the reason why earnest students have such a keen enjoyment of existence.—Chicago Herald.

An Emperor's Adviser.

The emperor of Austria has for years past found consolation for his troubles in the sympathetic companionship of a former well-known Viennese actress, Catharine Schratt, whose counsels are said to have been of the utmost advantage to him in many important affairs of state. The emperor is accustomed to drive out to the palace of Schoenbrunn and there, leaving his equipage, he is met by Mme. Schratt and takes her in the forest.

TARIFF PICTURES.

Our bright contemporary, the Evening Sun, relates that one of its newsboys, a lad of 14 years of age, was taken to a Bowery clothing store by a gentleman who wanted to see how cheaply a boy could be clothed, and was fitted out from head to foot for $1 51. Here is the schedule of items given:

Suit	79 cents.
Cap	8 cents.
Shoes	49 cents.
Tie	5 cents.
Stockings	10 cents.
Total	$1 51

The moral with which this story of cheap prices is pointed, is that in no other country could a lad be fitted out for so little money, and the low prices are one of the results of competition among manufacturers originally encouraged and always fostered by Protection in the Tariff laws.

We produced 1,800 tons of best sugar in 1888; but in 1891, thanks to the McKinley bill, we are producing 14,600 tons.

Foreign textiles and textile fabrics were sent to the United States from Bradford, England, during the seven months ending July 31, 1890, before the new tariff law took effect, to the amount of $13,422,000.

For the corresponding months of this year, under the new law, Bradford sent in similar goods only $6,656,000

This shows an increase of $6,766,000 devoted to employing American labor, stimulating the demand for American wool, and dispensing prosperity through the channels of American domestic trade.

The San Bernardino Times-Index says: Orange county has got a mighty black eye. The people down there pay bigger taxes than adjoining counties do, because the county is so small.

OUR GOODS ARE APPRECIATED.

The above sketch was made from a photograph taken in the stores of Weinstock, Lubin, & Co., Sacramento, one morning last May. At that time some of the other departments were equally crowded, as is the case on many days in the year.

Our goods are best appreciated by those who are here to see and feel them, and to compare with the goods of other houses.

If we simply had low prices, without right qualities and right styles, there would be little to gain in dealing here, and we should not be able to hold for a day the great trade that does come from Sacramento and through the mails.

In the very throng shown in the sketch are doubtless several "Mail Order Selectors." These people are carefully chosen for their intelligence and taste, and go about the store making purchases for those who send in their orders by post. They are held responsible for the satisfactory filling of every order, and dare not risk sending anything but the very best the house affords. Before the goods on any order are packed for shipment, they are carefully gone over by a staff of very competent people, called "Examiners." Thus two sets of people view critically every item, and as nearly as possible from the stand-point of the customer, whom they represent. Serious complaints are rarely received, although hundreds of orders are dispatched daily.

In many respects, mail-order shopping is more satisfactory than buying in person. The fine illustrations in the catalogue (a copy is sent free to any address), and the clear and impartial descriptions, enable one to sit at home and decide at their leisure just what goods will best suit their purpose. In an hour spent in looking over the catalogue, they can really see a larger variety of goods and get more useful information than they can in a day spent in shopping through a crowded store.

It is to the interest of the house to fill every order so well that other orders will be sure to follow. Small orders are often sent in as the forerunners of large ones. They are intended as "tests." This one fact, if nothing else, prompts us to fill every order, no matter how small, to the very best of our ability.

Samples of dress goods, prints, muslins, etc., are sent free on application. Those who order samples will oblige by stating as nearly as possible the colors desired, and about the prices they wish to pay. In this way much larger selections bordering on their wants can be sent.

SERIOUS DANGER

Threatens every man, woman or child living in a region of country where fever and ague is prevalent, since the germs of malarial disease are inhaled from the air and are swallowed from the water of such a region. Medicinal safeguard is absolutely necessary to nullify this danger. As a means of fortifying and acclimating the system so as to be able to resist the malarial poison, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is incomparably the best and the most popular. Irregularities of the stomach, liver and bowels encourage malaria; but these are speedily rectified by the Bitters. The functions of digestion and secretion are assisted by its use, and a vigorous as well as regular condition of the system promoted by it. Constitution and physique are thus defended against the inroads of malaria by this matchless preventive, which is also a certain and thorough remedy in the worst cases of intermittent and remittent fevers.

DE BUGLE ON DE HILL.

I dean' like de noise, or de marchin' ob de boys—
An' I 'low I dean' s'pose I evah will—
Fer de trampin' ob de feet to de drum's wild beat,
Fer de blowin' ob de bugle on de hill.
Hit minds me ob de day when Gabe marched away
An' ole missus stood beside de cabin do';
Sumpin' whispahed in my eah 'bout my little volunteah,
An' sade he nevah will come back no mo'.

I's thinkin' mos' to-day ob how he marched away,
Wid de eright sun a-climbin' up de sky;
Marched out an' down de street to de drum's wild beat,
An' den how dey fotched 'im home to die.
Oh, de sad, mounful way missus bowed her head to pray,
When Gabe said: "Hit's gittin' mighty still.
But I'll rise an' jine de boys when I heah de cannon's noise,
Er de soun' ob de bugle on de hill!"

Dar's a spot mighty deah to dis ole darky heah
Whar de sunshine am peekin' frough de palms,
Wid his hands 'pon his breast dar my soldier's gone to rest
Jes peacefully a-sleepin' in de calms.
An' do drum's wild deat er de tread ob marchin' feet
I know can't disturb 'im now until
De Lo'd gibs command, den I know he'll rise an' stan'
At de blowin' ob de bugle on de hill.

Hit 'pears as ef I seen de ole plantation green,
An' sometimes I reckon dat I heah
De regiment pass by, an I 'low I hear a cry
Like de moan ob my little volunteah,
An' de sobbin' on de day po' ole missus kneeled to pray.
An' sometimes when all aroun' is still,
I kin hear de tread ob feet, to de drum's wild beat,
An' de soun' ob de bugle on de hill.

FOR GOOD REASONS.

Why Sarah and Ira Were Never Married.

The story of how nearly Sarah Hochstetler came to marry Ira Tincher in 1871 has grown to be a part of the history of Oregon county, Mo. Ira is still a comparatively young man, and Sarah is still well on the sunny side of fifty, but Jim Burnes, whom she did marry, has been under the gravel and rocks that cover his forty-acre farm for these ten years or more. Sarah Burnes still lives on the farm, but in spite of the fact that she is husbandless and yet under fifty, she will never become the wife of Ira Tincher, though for years these two loved and swore a devotion that should have its ending even beyond the grave, if then.

Old Jim Burnes lived near Alton, in the center of the county, and young Ira worked for him. Burnes was fifty-three and Tincher was twenty-two. They had been together a year, when the young man surprised his employer by telling him that he was soon to marry Sarah Hochsteler, who made her home with "the folks," a few miles from the Howell county line, on the West Plains road.

"Goin' ter marry Sary!" exclaimed old Burnes. "Why, Iry, she's older'n you be, an' weddin's er that sort allus turns out bad."

The old man looked severely at his young "hand," and Ira looked at the ground. Burnes was gray and bewhiskered, but his form was as straight as a hickory sapling. His rough hands were tucked under his trousers and he stood with arms akimbo, eying the youth who stood before him.

"An' besides," went on old Burnes, "I've been keepin' comp'ny with Sary m'self fer more'n two years, an' she's jist right fer er man like me. I've got ter farm, an' I'm old cruuf, an' an' ter tell ther truth, an' not shock yer nerves too much, Iry, I kinder reckon she likes me."

"What!" exclaimed the young farm hand, "you an' my Sary!"

He stopped and buried his face in his hands.

"Thar, boy," resumed old Burnes, softly, "don't fuss. Ez I said, Sary is er year older'n you, an' she's on'y been er foolin'. Sary thinks you as on'y her boy, an' she kaint he'p her lookin' up ter me, yer know. My land an'—"

Ira slipped away while the old man talked. True enough, he thought to himself, he was only a boy. He put his hand to his face. There was no beard there—only little bunches of short, straggling hairs around his chin and up toward his ears. He kept walking for an hour, not thinking where he was going—only thinking of Sary and her pretty ways—her clean, homespun dresses and her merry laugh. Then he stopped.

"She said she liked me an' she said she'd marry me in ther summer, an' she never said nothin' erbout old Jim. But he's er deacon in ther church, an' he wouldn't lie erbout it—an' Sary, she never got er 'ligion, an' so she's been er foolin' me."

That was Ira's way of looking at it. He studied the whole situation over and over that afternoon. In the evening he went back to the Burnes cabin down in the valley, and after he had done the chores he went to old Jim and asked for his money.

"There's er leetle comin', I reckon," he said, "an' I'm goin' down inter Arkinsaw."

"Goin' ter quit?" asked old Burnes, carelessly. "Well, sorry yer kaint stay fer ther weddin', but hyars yer money, an' I hope yer'll have luck."

He paid his hand in shin-plasters—he only owed him four dollars—wages for a month—and Ira put on his hat, and gathering up the few things he had, walked out of the little cabin. He left old Burnes seated in front of the rough log fireplace, squirting tobacco juice against the dying embers, close to which the calloused soles of his bare feet were being toasted. The old fellow did not look up until he was sure that Ira must be gone. Then he rose, and putting on his cowhide boots, prepared to leave the place.

"That 's mer easy," he murmured. "Now, ef he don't go over ter Sary's to find out erbout it, I kin tell ther gal most anything. He'll jest erbout go thar ter say good-by ter her—yes, he'll do it, sure—sure he'll do it. Yes, I'll go an' beat him thar."

Old Burnes hastened into his best coat, and grasping a stout stick, went

THE most extraordinary freak of extravagance is an Eiffel tower in diamonds, one meter high, recently sold in Paris for $44,000.

THIS year's sale of the queen's yearlings brought an average of 345 guineas, compared with 715 last year. The highest price was £2,400 for a colt by St. Simon.

THE £5 and £2 pieces struck in the jubilee year have evidently not taken the public fancy, as no application was received for them during the whole of last year.

SHORT TALKS ABOUT PEOPLE.

LEOPOLD II., king of the Belgians, prides himself on being a workingman. He rises at six and does two hours' work before breakfast.

WILLIAM W. CLAPP, for twenty-five years connected with the Boston Journal, has retired from the editorial and business management of that paper.

CARDINAL MANNING'S dwelling in London is a plain and unpretentious, though large house, which looks more like a school than a private mansion.

MRS. HENRY CLEWS is considered by many people the handsomest woman in New York. She has a lovely face, with brilliant eyes, a fine complexion and shining dark hair.

CHARLES EMORY SMITH says he did not try to learn the Russian tongue while he was at St. Petersburg, for all educated people there speak English, French and German fluently.

CONCERNING EUROPEAN CITIES.

IN the city of St. Petersburg it begins to freeze at the end of October, and a general thaw rarely takes place before the beginning of April.

LONDON uses four and a half gallons of water per head for extinguishing fires, or eight thousand five hundred gallons per fire, and the estimated loss upon each is forty pounds sterling.

A REMARKABLE exhibition was opened at Berlin the other day. The exhibitors are the undertakers of Berlin, thirty-two of whom are represented, and the exhibitors are confined to coffins and funeral furniture.

A CULINARY COLLATION.

IN using an egg beater do not hold it in one place; move it round in the bowl.

NEVER put potatoes on the table in a covered dish; they will reabsorb their own moisture and become soggy.

IN flavoring puddings if the milk is rich lemon flavoring is good, but if the milk is poor vanilla makes it richer.

SHORTENING for pies should be cold and firm. Have your water cold and stand in a cool place while mixing and rolling out pastry.

IF a cake cracks open when baking it is either because the oven is too hot and cooks the outside before the inside is heated or the cake was made too stiff.

BEAT the yolk of an egg and spread on the top of rusks and pies just before putting them into the oven. The egg makes that shine seen on bakers' pies and cakes.

RESPECTING RAILROADS.

THE limited mail on the Pennsylvania line between Columbus, O., and Indianapolis is said to be the fastest railroad train in America.

RAILWAY schools for the children of railway employes are maintained by the railway companies in India at a very small expense to the pupils.

ILLINOIS has a larger railroad mileage than any other state in the union; or, to be more exact, it has 10,168 miles of main lines and 2,938 miles of sidings.

NOT less than 172 crimes were committed on Spanish railway cars last year, and in consequence the government has decided to abolish the closed coupes and introduce more of the American style cars, many of which are now in use.

WHISTLING FOR WIND.

The Supposed Origin of an Old Superstition of the Sea.

There is nothing so tedious, so aggravating to the sailor as a dead calm. Drift, drift, drift, day after day, the great burning sun overhead reflected by the waters until the eye becomes wearied with the eternal brightness. The sailor goes about his work listlessly. Not so the officer of the deck. He paces the poop with a quiet, nervous tread, "whistling for a wind."

He is scanning the horizon north, south, east and west, carefully noting every little patch of clouds and whistling with all of his soul for a wind. This is one of the old, old superstitions of the sailor, one of the beliefs which has been traced hither and thither, but never to the propitiation of the gods. It probably had its origin in the impatience of the mariner, who, while his vessel lay drifting idly in the "Zone of Calms," remembered with regret the hoarse moaning, shrieking and whistling of the winds in the more favored spots on the deep and involuntarily tried to imitate it. And this supposition is strengthened by the character of the whistling, for it must be remembered that the becalmed sailor does not whistle "Annie Laurie" or any of the popular songs of the day. The lonesome thrill of his monotonous "whistle" is a series of polyglot sounds that would set a magpie wild with envy. He does not aim at a rhythm, but ejects his puffs of air in long and short notes, now high, now low, like the sounds produced by the wind blowing through the ropes of the rigging.—St. Louis Republic.

Planting by Lamplight.

In the vineyards of Fresno county, Cal., hundred of men may be seen planting grapevines at night by lantern light. The vineyard lands seem to be infested with a multitude of huge fireflies, which are darting and moving in every direction. It is claimed that the setting of the stakes can be done much more easily and accurately by the aid of lanterns than in broad daylight, that more work is accomplished by the men in the same number of hours, and that a large amount of time is saved. One set of men work from nine o'clock in the evening until six o'clock in the morning, when they are relieved by another relay.

Restriction of Immigration Needed.

Gagley—"How do you happen to be begging, my man?"

Rourke—"Sure, sir, Oi've been ruined by foreign importations."

Gagley—"Why, you're an importation yourself."

Rourke—"Yis, sir; but the Eyetalians ruined me ould woman's apple-stand, and the Chinese took away her washin', and now the English civil-servish reform kapes me from gettin' a Government job because Oi can't rade or write."—Judge.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Ever since the establishment of the first paper on the bay of San Francisco, which we believe was the "Alta," removed from Monterey in 1849; the inhabitants of the Coast generally have been interested in the news from San Francisco. The "Alta," like many other pioneers of '49, has succumbed to the inevitable and gone over to the great majority, and, like other pioneers, has been succeeded by younger generations. The "Examiner" has taken perhaps the most prominent place in the newspaper field of late years, and its Weekly edition is very generally taken by those who want an interesting and reliable paper published at "The Bay." Everyone is familiar with the Premium Offers made by Mr. Hearst, the "Examiner's" enterprising publisher, and it is only necessary to say that this year the aggregate value of the premiums—of which there are 5,000—is $125,000, which are distributed among all the subscribers to the paper. In addition to these premiums, which range in value from 50 cents to $7,500, every subscriber receives one of the four great premium pictures, which will be mailed to him in a tube direct from the "Examiner" office as soon as the subscription is received:

"The Retreat from Moscow," by Meissonier.
"The Roman Chariot Race," by A. Wagner.

Each of these pictures is 21x28 inches, and they are elegantly reproduced in fac simile, showing every tint and color of the great originals, either one of which could not be purchased for $100,000.

"Women and Children First," by C. Napier Hemy
"Christ Leaving the Prætorium," by Gustave Doré

Each of these pictures is reproduced in photogravure, size 21x28, and eminently fitted for framing, and will adorn the walls of the most refined home.

The subscription price of the "Weekly Examiner" is $1.50, and subscriptions may be sent either direct to W. R. Hearst, Publisher, San Francisco, through the Local Agent of the "Examiner" or the Postmaster.
